

Campaigning with Crook, and stories of army life (March of America facsimile series)

The Big Horn and Yellowstone Expedition in 1876 was successful in scattering the united and victorious Indians of the Custer massacre. Commanded by General George Crook and covering eight hundred miles in ten weeks, the campaign was a hard one on Indians and soldiers alike. Before it ended, many of the cavalrymen were walking their horses had either died or were killed for food. The Indians had their problems, too. The earlier Rosebud and Custer fights had expended much of their ammunition, their own scorched-earth tactics had destroyed much of their grazing land, and they were pressed so hard by Crook they had little opportunity to hunt. The story of the campaign is vividly told by Charles King, adjutant of General Merritt's Fifth Cavalry. A fine companion volume to newsman John F. Finerty's War-Path and Bivouac (Norman, 1961), King's account presents the soldiers' point of view. It also covers the activities of the fifth Cavalry before joining Crook's force, including the fight on the War Bonnet, which succeeded in turning a large group of Cheyennes back to the Red Cloud Agency and prevented their joining Sitting Bull. It was on the War Bonnet that King witnessed Buffalo Bill Cody's famous fight with Yellow Hand, which he recounts in detail. King's book, first published in 1880, presents an articulate and detailed picture of the dangers and privations of Indian campaigning at its toughest.

Campaigning with Crook: The War Against the Sioux, 1876 time on General George Crook's stay during the American Indian Wars of the post-Civil War. Within these pages appear the Fight on the War Bonnet, the march to the Big Horn, Previous editions of this book have included Stories of Army Life -three of King's own. of the United States Army, from Its Organization, September 29, 1789, to March 2, 1903. Henry, Guy V. Army Catechism, or Simple Questions and Answers for 1, Voices of the American West. Facsimile of the first edition, with an introduction by John Greenway. Campaigning with Crook and Stories of Army Life. Imprint: Ann Arbor [Mich.] University Microfilms [1966] Physical description: v, 295 p. illus., port. 20 cm. Series: March of America facsimile series no. 98 Loading Oops, we couldn't load page information. The Minneapolis Star (Minneapolis, Minnesota) 21 Aug 1941, Thu Page 19. i loading. eBooks Amazon Campaigning with Crook, and stories of army life (March of America facsimile series) iBook B0006BOP2C. -. The Big Horn and Yellowstone Trove: Find and get Australian resources. Books, images, historic newspapers, maps, archives and more. Campaigning with Crook, and stories of army life. v, 295 p. : illus., port. 20 cm. Series. March of America facsimile series no. Crook, George, 1829-1890. eBooks free download Campaigning with Crook, and stories of army life (March of America facsimile series) PDF. -. The Big Horn and Yellowstone Expedition in Campaigning with Crook, and stories of army life King, Charles, Crook, George Taal: Engels Serie: March of America facsimile series Versie: [Repr.] Uitgever Find helpful customer reviews and review ratings for Campaigning with Crook, and stories of army life (March of America facsimile series) at .