

Fighting Insanity (Hounds of Hell Book 3)

Tierney Macfayden, newly appointed hound of Heaven, is prepared to do whatever he can never to work for Hell again and to live with the pain it caused him. Tasked with finding all the betrayed souls, these hounds have a new purpose in life. But after saving the first hundred souls, they needed to create a home for those they helped. Kicking and screaming, Kellan Short refuses to believe the story a kidnapper tells him about saving his soul. Hes an atheist for crying out loud! Seeing Tierney, and truly wanting someone for the first time in his life, Kellan cant believe it. His stepmothers manipulations warped him into trusting no one, and he denies that Tierney is real. Tierney wants to be there for his mate, but how do you help someone that believes you are a figment of their imagination or a drug-induced hallucination? By continuing to be there for him. Will they ever truly be together, or will they forever be fighting insanity?
