That is until he met Nora. He's falling for her, but as Rages right-hand man, Thrash has to stay focused on the task at hand. He has to be the cold-hearted man that the club relies on. Fire and Steel must confront their traitorous former club president, Bones, once and for all. She's struggling to make it in the wider world, and he's the only one who can help. Nora abandoned her life with her oppressive family for the chance to become a real artist. The club isn't just a place for commissions and patronage, though. Now, she works to understand the members of Fire and Steel, but does she really understand the stakes? As alliances shift and new players are revealed, Thrash and Nora must face their deepest fears. Will they be able to find true happiness with one another in the middle of all-out war?
