

Pages Torn from a Travel Journal

Its a hot day in Virginia during the Great Depression, when a bus breaks down on a lonely backwoods road. The passengers are told the repairs will take till tomorrow, so... What will they do tonight? Good fortune strikes! Just down the road, theres a carnival! The last man off is a writer and sightseer from Rhode Island, a man named Howard Phillips Lovecraft... OSLAUGHNASSEYS TRAVELLING SHOW! RIDES! CONCESSIONS! ODDITIES OF NATURE! COME ONE, COME ALL! A genuine mermaid! A living cadaver! A man with three eyes! Theres even a girl with hands for feet! Howard knows that such spectacles are all too often frauds, but what Howard doesnt realize is this: the carnivals frolicky fun will quickly degrade into a waking nightmare of unspeakable carnal depravity and sick-in-the-head violence beyond anything he could ever conceive. And when he finally flees the wretched scene... Something awaits him a thousand times worse.

And here, on the seventh page of the journal, he concludes his travel notes From Harlingen, which is a large town.<sup>6</sup> The following four pages were torn out. Pages Torn From a Travel Journal may be a slight anomaly in Lees oeuvre as it is quite satirical to the point of black comedy, and in manyPris: 103 kr. pocket, 2013. Skickas inom 2?5 vardagar.
