

The last time the Yellowstone Caldera erupted was over half a million years ago, causing a fast-moving wall of hyper-heated gas and rock called a pyroclastic flow, to devastate what is most now the United States of America. Geologists claim a new eruption is overdue. Years ago, now-retired army officer John Anderson experienced a troubling, prophetic dream of a coming disaster. Deeply affected, John has since developed a well-thought-out disaster plan and a well-stocked supply of survival essentials. Some see John as over cautious. Others dismiss him as a delusional disaster prepper. But when seismic activity at Yellowstone Park skyrockets, John realized he was right: the Caldera, dormant for thousands of years, is active once more. Kenneth Cary delivers a gripping tale of one mans determination to shield his family from an apocalyptic event while providing a narrative guide to disaster preparedness.
