Love and cultural values collide. Forty-year-old Braden Elkhorn has everything a wealthy, successful man needs except a wife. As the oldest of four brothers (none of whom are dating Native American women), he feels an obligation to help preserve his Cherokee heritage by marrying a Native American woman. His problem? He's fallen hard for a shy, full-figured, African-American beauty. Neida Armstrong can't seem to get love right. Her first love left her to teach in third world countries. Landing him will require her to fight for him. Sequel to Loving Large--Yours, Only And Always
