A Sweet, Clean, Western Romance Story
After a long journey to the Utah Territory, Ellen Myers is finally looking forward to meet her husband-to-be, Nathan Sweeney. His letters promised a good life; he was a fairly well-to-do cowboy with plenty of cattle and had just built a brand new cabin. She feels as though she's already in love with him through their sweet correspondence. Before she arrives to the town of Delle, a man who has blockaded the road warns her and the family she's riding with of the fevers in town. This man is none other than Nathan Sweeney! Nathan takes her to his campsite where he has been staying until the fevers pass. Ellen soon discovers that Nathan is definitely not like the sweet man he portrayed himself in his letters. As a matter of fact he's pretty gruff, and is not interested in much conversation. Why did he lie in his letters? Soon she meets a mysterious acquaintance of Nathan's- Jack, who shows up at odd times. Jack is very friendly and she feels like she almost knows him in a peculiar way. But he disappears almost as quickly as he shows up. Ellen has found herself in quite the circumstance. What's to become of her? Will she have to marry Nathan? Or will she be able to escape? And what about Jack? She sure hopes he appears again
